DEGREE INFORMATION

Penn State New Kensington, Penn State Beaver, and Penn State Shenango share authorization to deliver the Bachelor of Science in the Administration of Justice program (AJSCC). All courses needed for the degree will be offered at each campus, although students in the program should expect to take some courses via a combination of web-based and face-to-face technology in addition to the traditional classroom setting.

The Administration of Justice Program focuses on the interrelated components of the criminal justice system: public and private sector enforcement and investigation, legal systems, correctional treatment, and community services. The Administration of Justice Program helps you prepare for a challenging career though a unique combination of formal classroom instruction, practical training in a well-equipped crime lab, industrial study, and field experience—including an extensive internship experience.

Graduates find an array of career opportunities in federal, state, and local law enforcement and correctional agencies, probation and parole services, community crime prevention and treatment services, and private sector security.

Many opportunities are available in juvenile and drug rehabilitation counseling, recreation programs, and other sites. These career opportunities are expanding at a rapid rate, offering not only a competitive salary, but also excellent job security and extensive possibilities for advancement.
